ABSTRACT

Building on research, literature, and practical experience, this book shows how academic research can be connected to academic teaching activity in such a way as to ensure that neither operates in a vacuum, and that each can be enhanced by the other. The chapters are: (1) "Overview: Reshaping Teaching in Higher Education To Support the Links between Teaching and Research"; (2) "What Research and Scholarship Tell Us about Teaching-Research Relationships in Higher Education"; (3) "Academic Research and Student Motivation in Higher Education"; (4) "Designing the Curriculum To Link Teaching and Research"; (5) "Organizing the Institution To Link Teaching and Research"; (6) "Organizing the Department To Link Teaching and Research"; and (7) "Organizing the National and International Administration of Higher Education To Link Teaching and Research." (Contains 249 references.) (SLD)
